

HIGH STRENGTH PAPERBOARD AND METHOD OF MAKING SAME

Abstract

A method of making high strength paper or paperboard is provided, comprising the steps of adding a high modulus filler to the aqueous pulp slurry prior and forming the pulp slurry into paper or paperboard. Preferably, the filler is glass fiber that has been coated with a thermosetting resin.